Brief about the event (context and Learning outcomes)

The NSS unit organized an environmental and humanitarian initiative titled "Water and Food for Birds" with the aim of supporting and protecting birdlife during the harsh summer months. As part of this initiative, 35 clay pots were installed at various strategic locations across the campus to provide clean drinking water and food for birds. These pots will be regularly refilled and maintained by NSS volunteers to ensure a continuous supply of water and grains, helping birds survive the extreme summer heat and scarcity of resources.

Learning Outcomes

Through this activity, volunteers learned the importance of compassion towards all living beings and developed a deeper understanding of biodiversity conservation. The event fostered a sense of responsibility for the environment, encouraging participants to take proactive steps to protect wildlife. Additionally, it enhanced teamwork, planning, and long-term maintenance skills, as the project requires continuous monitoring and replenishment of the resources provided.
